

When the Trolley Came to Town

In 1896, the electric trolley made its debut in Westport. For its inaugural ride, a large host of visiting _____ enthusiasts from the county's _____ would take (adjective) (enthusiast group name)

the new electric trolley from the train station up Riverside Avenue to National Hall where they were scheduled to meet. Large crowds of people lined the way on Riverside and the Post Road, some even watching from the _____ of National Hall, excited to (noun)

see the new trolley. The time for the train to arrive in the station came and the trolley was expected any minute ... for nearly _____. Then, just as all seemed to be at a (amount of time)

loss, raucous jeers and laughter erupted from the windows of National Hall and the furthest reaches of the crowd. Instead, jingling up the track, came the old horse-drawn trolley, or _____ as it was called, with George "Pop" Mills at the reins. He guided (Proper Noun)

the trolley full of grangers up the track to their destination and the crowds _____ (verb - past tense)

and _____. The electrical supply for the tracks had failed. The electricity was (verb - past tense)

restored later that day, but not before the large crowds that had lined the streets to see it had _____.
(verb - past tense)